

KEA Smith-Wilson Award Nominations due March 1

You can help KEA identify and recognize an outstanding individual or group in your area by nominating them for the Lucy Harth Smith – Atwood S. Wilson Award for Civil and Human Rights in Education.

Nominations for the 2012 Smith-Wilson Award will be accepted until March 1, 2012. The award is presented to an individual or group for continuing work in the following areas:

- Multicultural education
- Contributions to the advancement of educational opportunities for minorities
- Contributions to the availability of multicultural education materials
- Contributions in the areas of innovative and creative strategies to advance and develop leadership opportunities for gender equitable and culturally diverse populations and leadership in the field of human relations

To begin the nomination process, contact the member of the KEA Diversity Committee nearest you.

More information about the KEA Smith-Wilson Award is available at the KEA website, along with a list of members of the KEA Diversity Committee and a nomination form.
