Kentucky Center for School Safety's Bullying Prevention Month campaign

The KY Center for School Safety wants our help in promoting kids to get involved in taking the pledge to stop bullying. To begin, please just take a moment and open the Pledge. [ins doc] Then discuss it vociferously with as many students in school as possible. Let's try to make it the main topic of discussion in our schools around the state throughout October, but particularly during America's Safe Schools Week being observed October 21-27. Given the public's general perception of school safety today, this is the perfect time to make this a robust team effort. Some high school kids will think this is too trite and perhaps more appropriate for younger kids...but the truth be known, they need to take this pledge as much as many of their younger school peers. The goal is to have every student in KY take this pledge. You can track the state's progress on the KCSS's website.
